Retiring with piece of mind and cash

A retiring shareholder wanted to realise the market value of his shares in the family company but did not want to sell to an outside party. He also wanted to make sure that his son had control of the company after he left.

We engineered a mechanism, which was approved by HMRC, for the son to receive shares in the company with no tax to pay and for the company to buy back the remaining shares from the father with an effective tax rate of less than 10% on the gain.

The company was also given four years to pay the retiring shareholder so that it had enough cash each year to fund future growth.

The father retired with £360,000 in his pocket and the son was left with a company in a stable cash position to grow the business for his children.
